

Our feasibility studies aim to ensure that any assumptions made follow a thorough and comprehensive research exercise.

Volterra's knowledge and understanding at local, national and global economic levels enables us to recommend a detailed and tailored research methodology to meet your needs.

Our team conducts an array of secondary research, undertakes literature reviews, consults market experts and provides a full analysis of comparable schemes.

Cash flows are produced and financial modelling is then carried out to determine the value of the project, which is followed by scenario and sensitivity analysis to allow clients to understand the risks associated with their project.

Once this analysis has been completed, where required a detailed Business Plan is produced. This explains and supports all assumptions used.

We pride ourselves in providing clients with a range of deliverables from conducting market research and SWOT analyses to reporting and reviewing of key economic variables and government policies.

At the end of any project Volterra presents our clients' with interactive spreadsheet models to allow them to truly understand how different scenarios can impact their return on investment.
